

Last Acts of Kindness; Care and Compassion at the End of Life

Offered by
Redwing Keyssar, RN, Author, Midwife to the Dying
Ladybird Morgan, RN, MSW

A live-online 4-session workshop for anyone who wishes to foster confidence and resiliency in these difficult times, as we care for our friends, our selves, our families, and community at the end of life.

Co-sponsored by Commonweal and the MERI Center for Education in Palliative Care at UCSF/Mt Zion.

We ALL will be in positions to be “end of life doulas” at some time--assisting friends and loved ones in the dying process. Most people however, have little training and minimal experience or understanding about what it means to “show up” at this delicate time.

The Chinese letters for “crisis” can be translated as “Dangerous opportunity.” The dangers of the current pandemic offer us all an opportunity to be better acquainted with the real territory of death and dying.

This workshop will:

- Prepare us to show up at the bedsides of the dying—using the tenets of Palliative Care: to help relieve suffering physically, emotionally, spiritually, psychologically
- Offer guidance in supporting caregivers-- both professional and “family” caregivers
- Assist us in creating personal toolkits for caregiving at the end of life
- Help us understand how our own myths and beliefs about life and death affect our roles as care-givers and care-receivers
- Offer practical knowledge about the dying process
- Pain and symptom management (an overview)
- Hospice and Palliative care issues
- Signs and Symptoms of approaching death
- Be a step towards facing our own mortality, which is key to serving others

As an online Zoom course, we will attempt to create as positive, connected and experiential environment as possible!

J. Redwing Keyssar is an RN with experience in Oncology, Critical Care, Hospice, Palliative Care. She is an author, poet, teacher, “midwife to the dying,” national presenter and frequent contributor to the public debate about Palliative Care. She is the Director of Patient and Caregiver Education at the MERI Center for Education in Palliative Care at UCSF/Mt Zion.

As a cancer survivor, she is passionate about and committed to the idea that “holistic healing” must be a more integral part of health-care.

Redwing states in the intro to her book: “Life is the circle of breath that connects two precious moments in time: birth and death. Both are mysteries.” In this workshop she will share experiences from her 30+ years of death-midwifing as well as lead the group in meditations, exercises and discussions to help further our ability to be present with impermanence. The goal of this work is not to take away the “mystery” but rather to explore this unknown territory so that we can all feel more comfortable serving the dying and being prepared for the time when we ourselves stand at the threshold.

Ladybird Morgan, RN, MSW, Executive Director and Co-Founder of the Humane Prison Hospice Project

(whose goal is to make prisoner-provided hospice services available in California’s 33 prisons), has been working in end-of-life care and on the frontlines of sexual violence as a registered nurse, clinical social worker, and educator for 20+ years. She has worked with many organizations including The Zen Hospice Project, Hospice By The Bay, Marin General Hospital and Doctors Without Borders (MSF). Ladybird has guided medical practitioners, families and private caregivers, as well as directors of programs and institutions around the world on how to be present to experiences that may be hard to hear or bear witness to. Ladybird has recently been invited to join Commonweal, supporting the work of various projects including the Cancer Help Program and Healing Circles.
