

Sustainable Caregiving for Care Partners of People with Neurologic Illness*

Sustainable Caregiving for Care Partners of People with Neurologic Illness* is a live-online program of eight weekly 90-minute classes. In each class, you will learn evidence-based skills to help make your caregiving sustainable.

Teaching methods include brief lecture periods mixed with experiential exercises. You will also have opportunities to speak with others in structured break-out groups (pairs or triads) as well as in the larger group.

Each class will have its own theme and the opportunity to practice new skills in a safe place, so that they're more available during the days ahead. Themes include:

- Attentional balance and grounding
- Repertoire of stress responses and meeting difficult emotions
- Positive intention setting
- Mindful self-compassion
- Challenging relationships and patients' concerns around "being a burden"
- Re-framing chronic sorrow
- Balance and growth in adversity
- 'What works for me?' -- wellness practice - journals to cultivate a positive mindset

* Any serious illness that impairs neurologic function, such as Parkinson's Disease, stroke, traumatic brain injury, brain tumors.

Judy Long is a palliative care chaplain and educator at UCSF with a deep commitment to care for caregivers, both family members and clinicians, based on her experience in hospital and hospice chaplaincy and facilitating grief and family caregiver support groups.
